Caer Goutodin

parent_page_wardb Possibly the most famous British Kingdom Goutodin, or Goddoin as it is named in the heroic British poem, had its capital at Din Eidyn, modern Edinburgh. It is a single province kingdom, formerly part of Alt Clut but gaining its independence in the mid-fifth century. With the fall of Bernaccia to a foederati coup d'état in 547AD Goutodin became host to the deposed King Morgan and, as a result, was exposed to endless Saxon raiding. A confederation of northern Kingdoms was formed around 590AD, but the famous ride to glorious defeat in 597AD spelled the end of Goutodin as a kingdom. A campaign set in Goutodin should begin in 570AD with the Saxons attacking from Ynys Medcaut. Provinces: 1
