A naive red headed young pre-Victorian lady

PERSONALITY

This is the "tough" version of Justine we're hearing, the one who's been through the apocalypse and can occasionally be prone to violence, although she's still civilised and still has a lot of her old Victorian formality. You might recall that she was put in prison at the end of Volume Four, so she isn't going to be in a particularly good mood here.

BACKGROUND

A naive red headed young pre-Victorian lady with some second sight encounters the Faction during one of their hunts. Her friend's aunt is threatened and her friend killed by Father Sabbath to obtain his Godfatherdom – vowing retaliation she intrigues Godfather Morlock who takes her under his wing and mentors her in the Faction.

Justine survives the Sontaran attack on the Eleven-Day Empire but loses her shadow. Morlock convinces the witch Godmother Quelch to bond the Grandfather's Knife to Justine and she obtains his shadow. She and Eliza flee the Empire before Lolita swallows it, and stay on the run seeking allies throughout time until they can deal with Lolita, inadvertently defeating Suteldi on the way.

She spent some time locked up at Shada, but was freed by Cousin Eliza (with Companion's help). She was caught up in the feud between Shrinecacher and the Blood Coteries before escaping.

Now with her nemesis Lolita out of the way, she is free to pursue her goal of re-establishing the Faction as a power.

TRAITS

Adversary (Major): The Great Houses - specifically because of the shadow she carries (she can be held accountable for the crimes of the Grandfather)

Brave (Minor): Almost a compulsory trait for members of the Faction, as they are prone to martyrdom and noble sacrifice

Faction Paradox Recruit (Minor): Seeking revenge against a Faction member, she joins to learn their ways

Indomitable (Minor): +2 bonus to rolls to prevent Hypnosis, Possess or similar. As part of her Faction Paradox Recruit trait.

Faction Paradox Member (Minor): Cousin

Obligation (Major): She owes loyalty and obedience to the Faction and its ideals.

Natural Weapon: Sumbrae Que Carta (Special): Cousin Justine is bonded to the Grandfather's Shadow.

Ritualist (Special): Justine is able to open doors and control Faction vehicles with rituals.

Witchblood (Special): Justine can drop shadow weapons and her sense preeminence.
