

Glenn

By Trencher (original post)

An really tall and thin man with shaggy hair and a wild eyed look. He dresses in old style clothing except for his jacket which is a brown long coat. His left shoe must have some gum (or something) stuck under it because it sort of stick to the floor when he walks. He also walks with a slight limp and he sometimes mumbles to himself. He lives permanently in the hotel because he is related to the owner. He makes a modest living for himself stuffing and selling animals, his style is to mix and match different parts so that it look almost like a new creature. Among the things he has put together you can find both hairy tentacle things and a ball-of-mouth-creatures. He uses rats, cats and dogs for the most part most of the light bulbs in the hotel room does not work anymore because he rarely bother to change them, only the one on his work desk get changed if needed. Whenever a car runs past his window (He lives in the lower reaches of the hotel) all the shadows in the room jump back and fourth making the stuffed things look more alive than usual.

Although he is scruffy looking he is not dirty or foul smelling, he is also quite nice if talked to although he gives weird compliments like: "I never seen hair with your shade of red before-its lovely" or "You have a very interesting nose compared to your brow" these compliments are followed by silence as Glenn stares off into space. Glenn is known to wander the back allys of the city looking for stray animals and he carries an old style bayonet which he can use with such skill that would be robbers and other punks leave him alone.
