

Wally

By Basil (original post)

Not his name, his nickname. He's in his mid-30's, average in height, weight, etc. Talk to him for a while and you'll realise he's of average intelligence, but very poorly educated; as well, he seems content to remain a short-order cook.

There's just one unusual thing about him: he's wall-eyed (hence the nickname). When his right eye is looking straight ahead, his left is pointed about 45 degrees to the left; when his right eye is looking full right, his left is not quite straight ahead (something wrong with the muscle that pull the left eye "nosewards").

This is disturbing to look at enough, but what makes it worse is he's got 20/20 vision in the left eye, but 20/150 in the right. Since he's always forgetting his glasses, he tends to turn his head and look at people with his left eye, which tends to creep people out.

Other than his walleye he's an ordinary fellow. (figured we needed a creepy but not bizarre person in here.)
