

Willing Pawn

By 5lippers (original post)

The Players meet Willing Pawn in the hotel and before long he's drunk and telling them how he's a living game piece in a competitive game of mind-boggling complexity and scale. The only sense the players can make of Willing Pawn's babbling is that The Game is played by the fabulously rich and powerful, he is a living piece for someone called Rook (the highest scoring player of all time) and that points are awarded to each player by The Watchers.

The following morning, the players discover that a piece of essential evidence from an ongoing/current investigation has been stolen. In the place where the evidence is usually kept there is a message from Willing Pawn which reads:

"Thanks Man! This is going to be HUGE! Rook owes you one but watch out for Beatrix - she's going to be p*ssed!"

Uh-oh, that doesn't sound good...

What is The Game? Who's Rook and can the players call in their favour before Beatrix exacts her revenge?
