

The Soda Man

By csyphrett (original post)

Every day and evening, a man walks through the lobby from the rear of the hotel with a soda in his hand. No one ever sees him enter to get a soda out of a machine, and once he gets out the front, he is not on the street.

If stopped, he just explains that he was thirsty and wanted a soda on the way to or from work. He usually excuses himself with I'm late, or similar.

The problem is there is no door, or the door is locked from casual passersby, and the drink machine doesn't carry Diet Rally Cola.
