Session 7

During Thodric's interrogation over being armed and near the Margravine during her attempted assassination, he was made to touch a magical gem that is used by the Truthsayers of the Church which acted like a lie detector. If at this stage, Thodric had decided to stop being laconic, and merely answer the questions about the assassination - and had used the opportunity to claim his inheritance, there would have been:

- A full inquiry
- people trying to hush him up
- a court case
- a confrontation with the Margravine chasing her into the dungeons and attempting to capture her while she was defended by [censored pending player discovery]
- her escape
- Thodric's rise to power, and he'd then have his own 50 thousand troops.

Those troops will come in handy when the Red Star lands
