Namespaces

A namespace is a single word put in a link, followed by a colon, then the actual link. It functions exactly like a subdirectory on a drive. Creating a small folder for files and pages to go in.

It allows you to have multiple page names that are the same, but located in different subfolders. You could, for example have a page of wiki:help for wiki general help, and have another page of champions:help for Champions general help. What appears in the Trace bar near the top of the screen is “help” which is a small word and won't be too long for when you want to go to a previous page, following your “breadcrumbs”
